quarter of a million since the beginning of the war.

Irish or American?—Patrick Kelly was charged in the Belfast Police Court to-day, that, being an alien, he did embark at the prohibited port of Belfast on the 29th inst. without the permission of the Secretary of State, contrary to the provisions of the Aliens Registration (Consolidation) Order, 1916. When questioned, the accused first said that he was a citizen of the United States, and produced his naturalisation papers. He was remanded in custody until Tuesday, Mr. Nagle, R.M., remarking that in the meantime the police might communicate with the United States Consul in Belfast.

The Fatal Fire in a Marine Store.—The inquest upon the bodies of the seven women workers who were burned to death in the fire at the marine store premises of Messrs.

O. and T. Gallagher, Nelson street, Belfast, was continued to-day. Evidence was given by the City Surveyor, Mr. Culler, to the effect that the floors and stairs in the building were of wood. The building was passed as a store, and not as a factory, and the Corporation had no requirements to be carried out in the case of a building of that kind. The manager of the store gave evidence regarding an exposed gas jet, which, he said, was seven feet from the floor. Pro-

THE CONDITIONS EXISTING at the present moment (which may, of course, change at any time) provide a strong EXTRA reason for the purchase NOW of Thompson's Compound Cakes and Meals. At all times economical, our CUBE series of cattle foods are specially so just now.

FATENETS (Res.) Small Cubes (greatly labour-saving) for fattening and general feeding.

COMPARATIVE PRICE is the extra reason for present purchase. It seldom happens that we can offer these products so cheap in comparison with other feeding stuffs. To the well known economy in labour and absence of waste in these cube-form cattle foods you must add comparative cheapness-if you order NOW.

SYDNEY, WEDNESDAY SYDNEY, WEDNESDAY.

Sir Doughas Mawson has sailed for England on military service. In an interview before departure he stated that it was too early to consider whether he would command a Shackleton relief expedition. The Aurora was the only ship fit for the journey, and the departure of the expedition would not be necessary until January, 1917. Therefore, there was plenty of time. ROYAL

A NEWSPAPER COMMENT.

Lord ST. DAVIDS asked whether the attention of the Government had been called to an article by the Military Correspondent of the Boily Telegrophi, in which he said:

"The German strategists are bold to rashness. They know that cap the troops and, what is even-more important, our best officers—are abroad; so that they probably reckon on an easy victory if once they can put ashore some half-dozen army corps. What steps are incumbent on our War Office in the teeth of this menace, remote though it be? The best precaution we can take is to confide the command of the troops told off to the delence of England to competent Staff officers, and, at whatever cost to the Army in the field, some such leaders should be reserved for this duty. To tell off large bodies of troops to fight a defensive campaign under incapable chiefs is a sheer waste of men."

The noble ord said he desired to know we here the statements had been called to any moment should occasion arise. RUSSIA'S MESSAGE TO the annual meeting of the shareholders at Port Sunlight, said there was a question of what was to be the national policy when the war ended, in order that we should reap the full advantage from victory. Everyone agreed that a full and complete reward should resuit from our victory over the enemy, but there was some difference of opinion as to the best methods to achieve it. There must be evacuation by the enemy of all conquered territory, payment by the Germans of a full indemnity, security against the possibility of a recurrence of war, and, finally, the surrender of every German Colony and all enemy thipping interned in neutral ports. There could be no peace till these ends were achieved. But when war ceased all hitterness must end. The cry of special tariffs against Germany was a cowardly cry, worthy only of a backward race of people. The timid and nervous policy of tariffs and restrictions against former enemies could only operate in stimulating false Imperialism, founded on injustice and disregard for the rights of others. There was no cash for Germany would need raw materials after the war, and would come to the British Empire war, and would come to the British Empire for them. If we refused to trade she would go to Scandinavia, whose shipping trade would be stimulated at the expense of our own.

on Tuesday agreed to receive the deputation from the Clyde, the deputation expressed a desire that he (Mr. Pringle) should be present with them at the interview, and that was the extent to which he was an uninvited guest. The real question was whether the deputation departed under the impression that there was an appointment for the following day, and he could only say that he and Mr. Ramsey Macdonald and the deputation left the room under the impression that the meeting was to be continued on the following day, and it was with the greatest disappointment that everyone present heard from Dr. Addison on Wednesday that he declined to see them further. Up to the present he had naither there nor anywhere else expressed any opinion on the dispute, but he regarded Dr. Addison's statement in the House on Tuesday as most unfortunate. He believed it was an inaccurate account of the situation, and no more deplorable statement could be made by a Minister than that there was a treasonable conspiracy among the workers. He believed that there was no such conspiracy; that it was untrue that the Clyde Workers' Committee as a body were organising striftes for the purpose of obtaining the repeal of two Acts of Parliament. He hoped that means would be taken to bring about a settlement, and he had no wish to say anything which would exacerbate feeling on either side. He was content to leave his own conduct in the matter to the judgment of the House.
